Evil Little Slimy Nasty! Bad!!!

This week's prompt hasa lot to do with a bunch of adjectives that could be considered negative. Usually the prompt has a noun to go with the adjective, but this time it's all adjectives. Also maybe describing them all as negative is not entirely right. Lots of little things are good and cute. Bad and Nasty are often used as slang phrases for something cool. All together though, these words paint a very particular image in the minds eye.

The picture in my mind's eye that I see is of some kind of mucus demon conjured from a much smaller version of hell. Bent on creating sticky, slimy chaos, but hampered by the fact that it is too small to really do much damage. Evil, little slimy, nasty, and bad at his job.

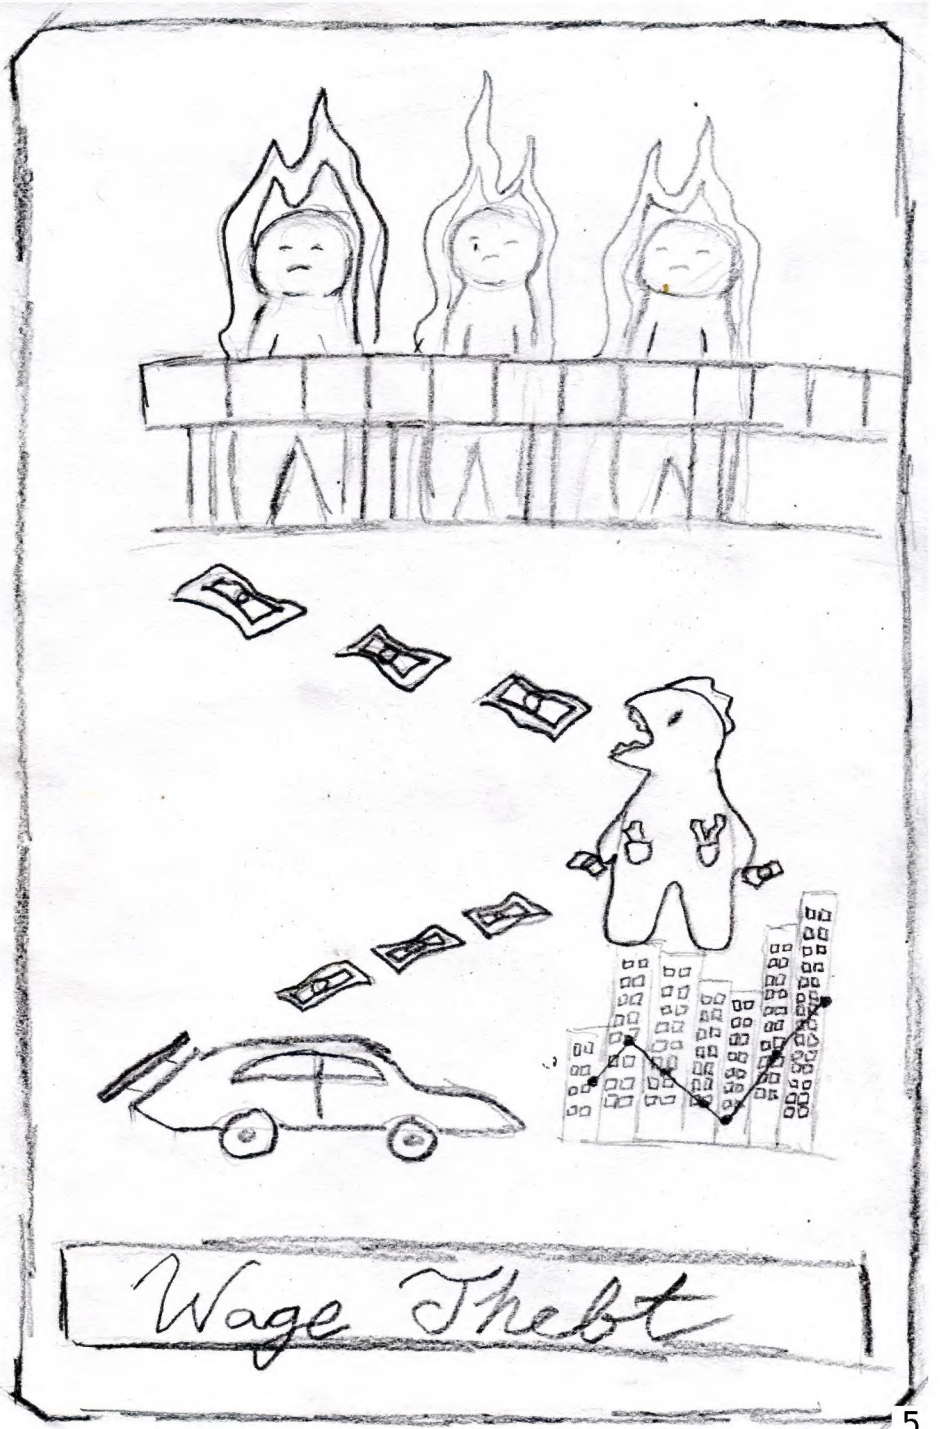

Many of the drawer's tonight have talked about their own pets. Although they do love their pets unconditionally, all pet owners have at one point yelled one of these adjectives at their lovable pet. Good thing they don't understand english.

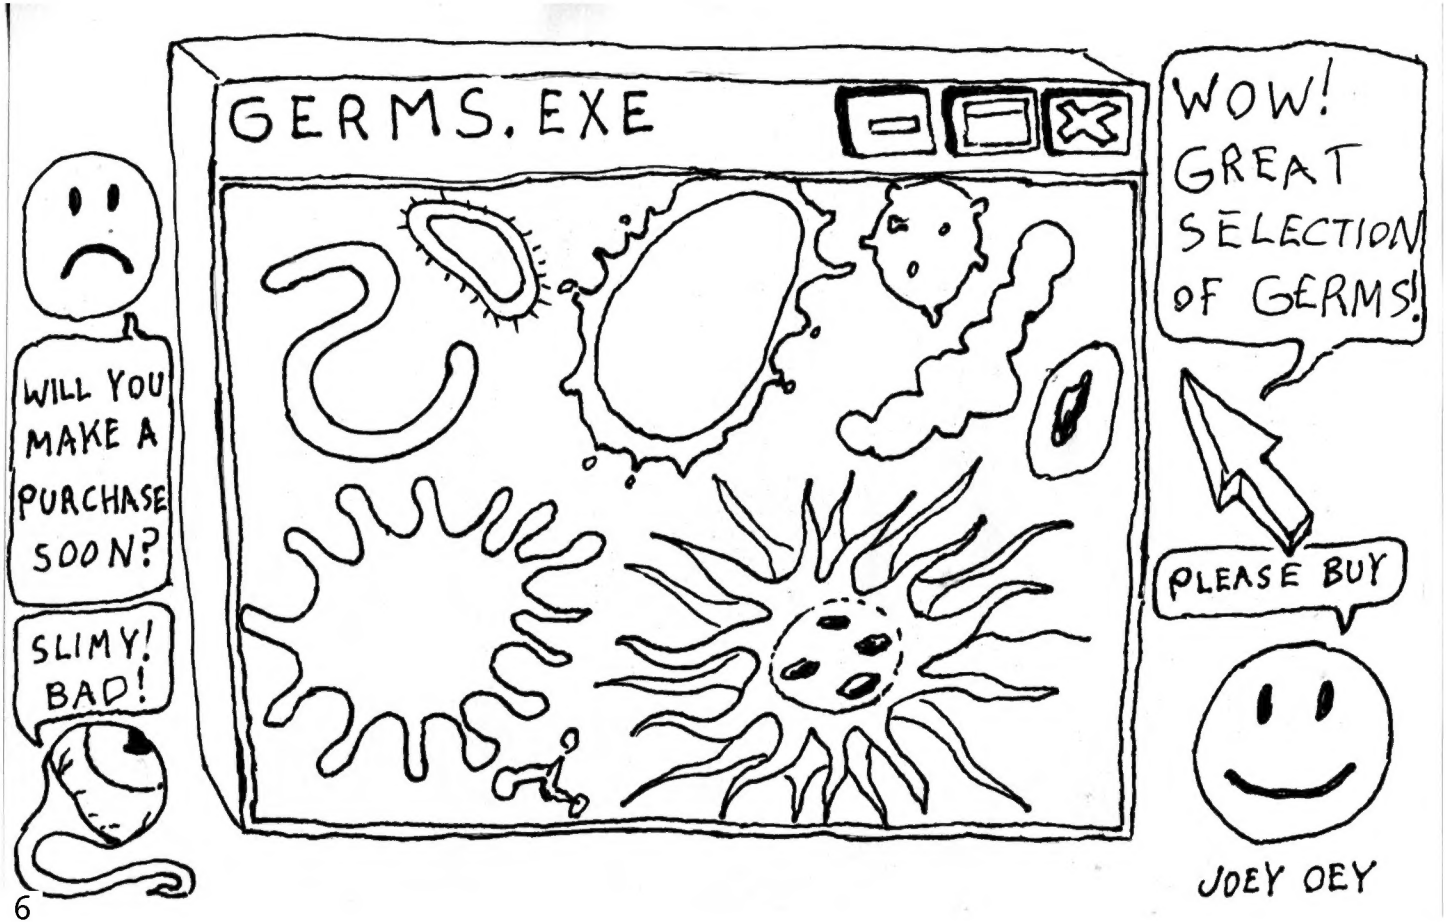

When we really get down to it, there are bits and pieces, or even times and places, in us all that one or two of these words would accurately describe. We have to get to know these evil, little, nasty, slimy, bad pieces of our selves, if only to work towards bettering our lives every day, and that is what this zine is all about. A bunch of slimy, nasty, evil drawings.

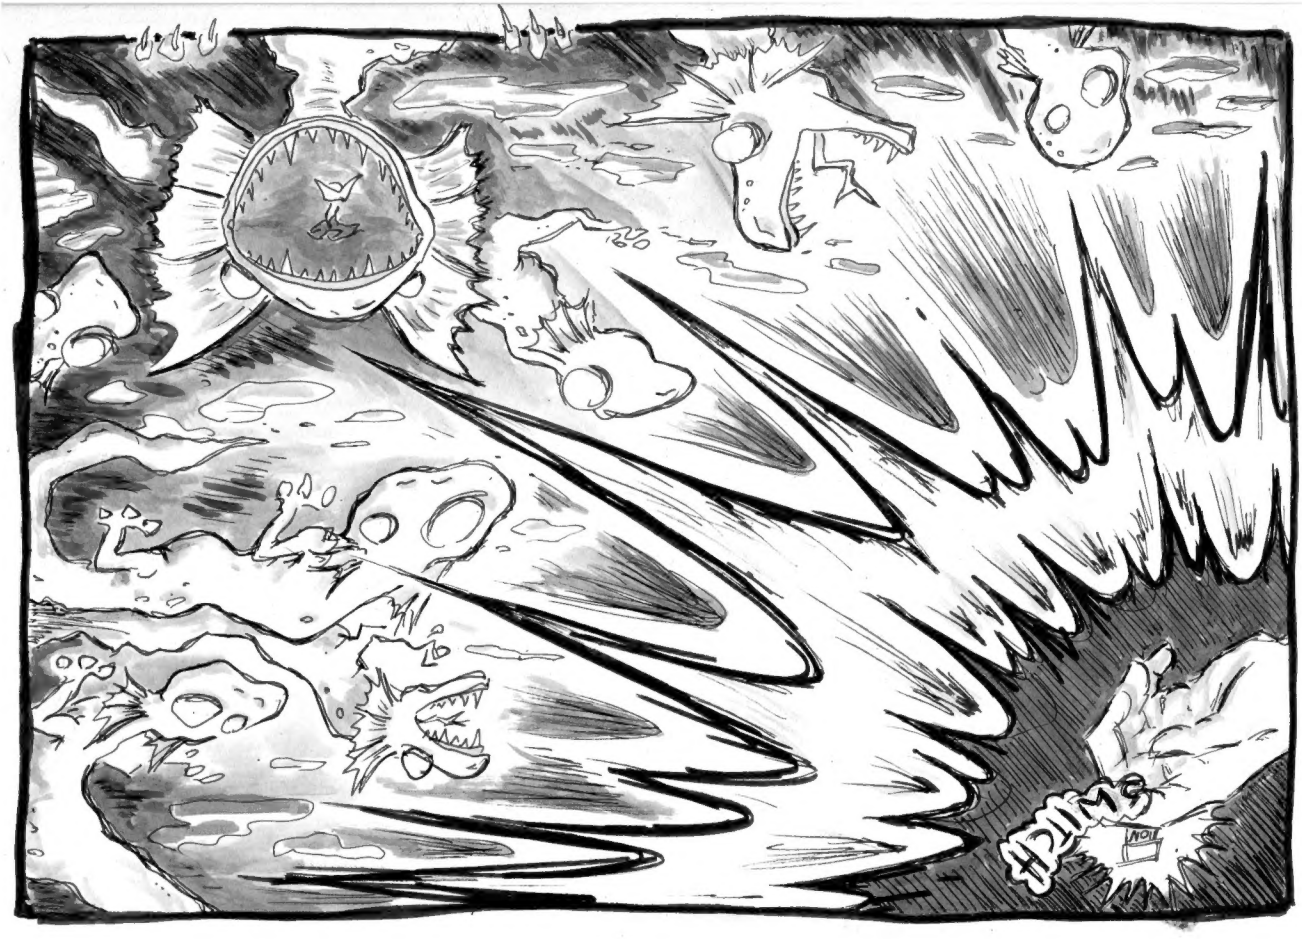

We picked the prompt in the usual psuedo random way and began drawing at 7pm at Le Voyeur. Every page is made by a different artist, and you could be one of those artists if you come to Le Voyeur on a Sunday. So turn the page and see what kind of evil little slimy nasty bad zine we have come up with this week.
